Yarra City Council is considering an amendment to the Environment Local Law No. 3. Public submissions about the proposed amendment are now invited.

Council proposes to make an amending local law, to be known as "Environment (Amendment) Local Law No. 13". The following information about the proposed local law is provided in accordance with section 119 of the Local Government Act 1989.

Planning and Environment Act 1987
BRIMBANK PLANNING SCHEME

Notice of Amendment
Amendment C23

Brimbank City Council has prepared Amendment C23 to the Brimbank Planning Scheme.

The land affected by the Amendment is in Derrimut, bounded by Boundary Road to the south, Mt Derrimut Road to the east and Robinsons Road to the west and Middle Road to the north. The total site area of this land is approximately 259 hectares.

The land has been identified in the Brimbank Planning Scheme as the 'South West Non Urban Area' and was subject of a study jointly commissioned by the Brimbank and Wyndham Councils.*

An Amendment has been prepared to rezone the land from Rural Zone to an Industrial 2 Zone.

The Amendment proposes: to amend the Municipal Strategic Statement to provide a policy context and strategic justification for the rezoning; to delete the Local Planning Policy 'South West Non Urban Land Policy'; to include a Schedule to the Development Plan Overlay, which includes a concept plan, to provide guidance for the future development of the land from a Rural zone to an Industrial 2 zone; to include the site known as 'Foxley Lodge' and its drystone walls in the Schedule to the Heritage overlay.

EXEMPTION

Application No. A156 of 2001

The Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal has considered an application pursuant to Section 83 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995 by the Western Region Health Centre Ltd. The application for exemption is to enable the applicant to advertise for and employ male persons to the positions of psychiatric disability support workers.

Upon reading the material submitted in support of the application, the Tribunal is satisfied that it is appropriate to grant an exemption from Sections 13, 100 and 195 of the Act to enable the applicant to advertise for and employ male persons to the positions of psychiatric disability support workers.

In granting this exemption, the Tribunal noted:

- There are currently no full-time or week day male support workers within the psychiatric disability support service.
- Male support workers are important so as to give clients a choice of gender of worker, which is consistent with the National PDSS Standards.
- The positions provide a role model for male service users, particularly within the residential rehabilitation service for young people, who have stereotyped views of gender roles.
- The positions will provide a holistic perspective on services delivery issues and models through a mixed gender staffing population.

The Tribunal hereby grants an exemption to the applicant from the operation of Sections 13, 100 and 195 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995 to enable the applicant to advertise for and employ male persons to the positions of psychiatric disability support workers.

This exemption is to remain in force from the day on which notice of the exemption is published in the Government Gazette until 6 June 2004.

Explanatory Notes

Background

The NVD is part of the cattle industry's commitment to food safety and product quality. The cattle industry developed it to help producers document the history of cattle consigned for sale or slaughter. Producers are strongly encouraged to provide a NVD for all cattle they offer for sale or slaughter and to insist on a NVD before buying cattle.

The cost of any residue testing required or undertaken in response to information given on the NVD is a commercial matter between the vendor and buyer (except where industry funds such testing).

Attachment of a wrap-around tag

Producers who have used wrap-around transaction tail tags on the consignment to which this Declaration refers are encouraged to attach a tag to this side of the form, identical to the tags attached to the cattle.

Completing the declaration

You should make all inquiries needed to ensure that you answer NVD questions accurately. Criminal prosecution and/or civil action may be taken against any person making false, misleading or unverified statements on a NVD they supply for cattle.

The NVD includes a vendor/manager's declaration that the cattle described have not been fed contrary to the law. State and Territory laws prohibit the feeding of most animal materials, such as meat and bone meal, to ruminants.

Animal material means any material, tissue or blood taken from an animal and includes meal obtained from rendering tissue and blood from animals.

Meal means blood meal, meat and bone meal, bone meal and any other meal made from material of animal origin.

These restrictions do not apply to - tallow, gelatin and milk products.

Contact your State or Territory Agriculture/Primary Industries Department for more details on these feeding restrictions.

For cattle identified with NLS endorsed Breeder or Post-breeder devices, indicate in the space provided the number carrying such devices and the device type(s).

HGP Status Declaration (Question 1)

Only declare cattle HGP Free if: (a) they were bred on your property and you know they have never been treated with HGPs or; (b) you have evidence that the particular cattle have never been treated with HGPs. Acceptable evidence includes an agent's invoice identifying the seller and endorsed with the words 'HGP Free' or a signed statement or NVD from the previous owner declaring the cattle HGP Free. Otherwise, you must declare the cattle as HGP treated or of unknown status.

Only use pink HGP free tags on cattle you declare HGP free.

Cattle you declare HGP Free MUST be individually identified with a pink 'HGP Free' tag if sent as a mixed load with treated or unknown status cattle. A separate NVD is required for the HGP free cattle.

Analysts' reports

Attach copies of analysts' reports of residue tests done on by-product stockfeeds (Question 4), or on results of biopsy testing of cattle in the consignment (Questions 5, 6 and 7), to the completed Declaration. Copies of letters from State authorities detailing the residue status of the cattle may also be attached.

By-product stockfeed (Question 4)

Includes any plant material not produced primarily for livestock consumption, such as waste fruit, vegetables and fibre crops including peel, pulp, pressings, stem and leaf material. (It does not include grain and grain by-products, cotton seed, oilseed meals, tallow or molasses.)

AQIS Targeted Testing List (TTL) (Question 5)

Producers with properties on an AQIS TTL for organochlorines (OCs), or other chemical residues, have been advised in writing by State Departments of Agriculture/Primary Industries of their TTL status.

Answer "Yes" if the property has a TTL status such as a T1, T2, T3, T4 or F status under the NORM program. [Properties with a C (clear), M (minimal risk) or a T5 classification do not have an AQIS TTL status for the purposes of this Declaration.]

Placed under restrictions (Question 5)

This means quarantine, detention or the management of cattle with residues above MRL under other regulatory restrictions.

Veterinary drugs and chemicals (Question 6)

Veterinary drugs and chemicals administered orally, by injection or to the skin, including antibiotics, vaccines, worm and mastitis treatments and externally applied insecticides, but excluding vitamin and mineral treatments. For calves, weaners and wealers, include exposure through access to milk from cows treated or exposed to drugs or chemicals that may be excreted in the milk.

Endosulfan (Question 8)

Part (a): You must answer "Yes" if endosulfan was the active ingredient in any spray, applied within the past 10 weeks, to any crop on any property grazed by these cattle in the 42 days before this sale.

Part (b): You must answer "Yes" if all of the following apply to any property grazed by the cattle in the 42 days prior to sale: The property owner or manager has waived the endosulfan down wind no-spray zone requirement for a nearby cotton property and; Endosulfan has been sprayed on that nearby cotton within ten weeks prior to the sale of these cattle and; At the time of spraying any part of the property grazed was in a down wind no-spray zone.

[Endosulfan may only be applied to cotton within a down wind no-spray zone if the down wind landholder (property owner, lessee or their authorised agent) has waived the no-spray zone requirements in writing.]

Additional Information (Question 9)

Use this section to provide other required information on chemical use, animal health status or commercial matters that are not covered specifically on the form.

Export Slaughter Intervals (ESIs)

An ESI is the period following treatment when cattle are unsuitable for export processing. ESIs are an industry standard to ensure export requirements are met. A withholding period (WHP) is the period following treatment when cattle are unsuitable for processing for domestic consumption in Australia. ESIs and WHPs for commonly used veterinary chemicals are listed in the table to the right. The WHP is in brackets.

Important Information on ESIs

- The label WHP is the minimum legal requirement at all times;
- Label directions for use must be strictly adhered to for the ESI to apply;
- Lean cattle usually have higher residue levels than normal. It is wise to add a margin to ESIs for very poor stock or stock losing condition;
- NA indicates that an ESI is yet to be determined; and
- NS means that an ESI has been considered but could not be established from the information available.

Updated ESI information is available on the Internet at the MLA website mla.com.au or from the MLA Infoline on 1800 635445.

Explanatory Notes

Background

The European Union (EU) has advised that the pink tail tag and ear tag system for identifying 'HGP Free' cattle is no longer acceptable. To meet the requirements of the EU, a new system for producing cattle for EU processing was introduced by AQIS, with industry support, commencing on 1 December 1999. To produce cattle for the EU, properties must be accredited under the Export Control Act 1982. Cattle from such properties must be individually identified with an AQIS approved NLIS endorsed Breeder or Post-breeder Tag, and consignments must be accompanied by a completed and signed copy of this Declaration.

Definitions

Manager: A manager of a property as defined under the Export Meat Orders delegated legislation under the Export Control Act 1982, means the person responsible for the day-to-day farm management of the property.

Facility: For the purpose of the EUVD a facility describes a property, feedlot, saleyard or processing plant that has been accredited by AQIS to supply the EU market.

A person who makes a false or misleading statement in this declaration is guilty of an offence against the Criminal Code Act 1995, the punishment for which is a period of imprisonment not exceeding 12 months.

Attachment of a wrap-around tag

Producers who have used wrap-around transaction tail tags on the consignment to which this Declaration refers are encouraged to attach a tag to this side of the form, identical to the tags attached to the cattle.

Completing the declaration

You should make all inquiries needed to ensure that you answer EUVD questions accurately. Criminal prosecution and/or civil action may be taken against any person making false, misleading or unverified statements on a EUVD they supply for cattle.

The EUVD includes a manager's declaration that the cattle described have not been fed contrary to the law. State and Territory laws prohibit the feeding of most animal materials, such as meat and bone meal, to ruminants.

Animal material means any material, tissue or blood taken from an animal and includes meal obtained from rendering tissue and blood from animals.

Meal means blood meal, meat and bone meal, bone meal and any other meal made from material of animal origin.

These restrictions do not apply to - tallow, gelatin and milk products.

Contact your State or Territory Agriculture/Primary Industries Department for more details on these feeding restrictions.

Analysts' reports

Attach copies of analysts' reports of residue tests done on by-product stockfeeds (Question 4), or on results of biopsy testing of cattle in the consignment (Questions 5, 6 and 7), to the completed Declaration. Copies of letters from State authorities detailing the residue status of the cattle may also be attached.

By-product stockfeed (Question 4)

Includes any plant material not produced primarily for livestock consumption, such as waste fruit, vegetables and fibre crops including peel, pulp, pressings, stem and leaf material. (It does not include grain and grain by-products, cotton seed, oilseed meals, tallow or molasses.)

AQIS Targeted Testing List (TTL) (Question 5)

Producers with properties on an AQIS TTL for organochlorines (OCs), or other chemical residues, have been advised in writing by State Departments of Agriculture/Primary Industries of their TTL status. Answer "Yes" if the property has a TTL status such as a T1, T2, T3, T4 or F status under the NORM program. [Properties with a C (clear), M (minimal risk) or a T5 classification do not have an AQIS TTL status for the purposes of this Declaration.]

Placed under restrictions (Question 5)

This means quarantine, detention or the management of cattle with residues above MRL under other regulatory restrictions.

Veterinary drugs and chemicals (Question 6)

Veterinary drugs and chemicals administered orally, by injection or to the skin, including antibiotics, vaccines, worm and mastitis treatments and externally applied insecticides, but excluding vitamin and mineral treatments. For calves, weaners and wealers, include exposure through access to milk from cows treated or exposed to drugs or chemicals that may be excreted in the milk.

Endosulfan (Question 8)

Part (a): You must answer "Yes" if endosulfan was the active ingredient in any spray, applied within the past 10 weeks, to any crop on any property grazed by these cattle in the 42 days before this sale.

Part (b): You must answer "Yes" if all of the following apply to any property grazed by the cattle in the 42 days prior to sale: The property owner or manager has waived the endosulfan down wind no-spray zone requirement for a nearby cotton property and; Endosulfan has been sprayed on that nearby cotton within ten weeks prior to the sale of these cattle and; At the time of spraying any part of the property grazed was in a down wind no-spray zone.

Additional Information (Question 9)

Use this section to provide other required information on chemical use, animal health status or commercial matters that are not covered specifically on the form.

Export Slaughter Intervals (ESIs)

An ESI is the period following treatment when cattle are unsuitable for export processing. ESIs are an industry standard to ensure export requirements are met. A withholding period (WHP) is the period following treatment when cattle are unsuitable for processing for domestic consumption in Australia. ESIs and WHPs for commonly used veterinary chemicals are listed in the table to the right. The WHP is in brackets.

Important Information on ESIs

- The label WHP is the minimum legal requirement at all times;
- Label directions for use must be strictly adhered to for the ESI to apply;
- Lean cattle usually have higher residue levels than normal. It is wise to add a margin to ESIs for very poor stock or stock losing condition;
- NA indicates that an ESI is yet to be determined; and
- NS means that an ESI has been considered but could not be established from the information available.

Updated ESI information is available on the Internet at the MLA website mla.com.au or from the MLA Infoline on 1800 635445.

Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act 1986

CODE OF ACCEPTED FARMING PRACTICE FOR THE WELFARE OF GOATS (VICTORIA)

Introduction

This code is intended as a guide for all people responsible for the welfare and husbandry of goats. Goats are kept in situations which vary from extensive grazing to close confinement and housing. Whatever the form of husbandry, owners, managers and custodians of goats have a duty of care and a clearly defined legal responsibility under the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act 1986 to care for the welfare of the animals under their control.

The basic behavioural, anatomical and physiological needs of goats are considered in this document, irrespective of the method of husbandry practised.

The importance of competent stockmanship and management in animal welfare cannot be over-emphasised. Important skills of the competent manager and stockperson include the ability to recognise the early signs of distress or disease in goats so that the cause can be identified, and prompt, appropriate, remedial action taken.

The basic requirements for the welfare of goats are:

- (a) food and water to sustain health and vitality;
- (b) sufficient space to provide freedom to stand, lie down, stretch, turn around, move about and groom themselves;
- (c) protection from predation;
- (d) protection from disease, including disease that can be exacerbated by management;
- (e) protection from extremes of climate during certain phases of their life;
- (f) protection from pain, suffering and injury.

1. Food and Water

1.1 Food

Goats should have access to or be provided with adequate food to maintain their well-being. They are more selective feeders than either sheep or cattle and can choose from a wider range of plants including browse from trees and shrubs. Goats are fastidious, and will not thrive or produce on soiled, contaminated, tainted or poor quality feed and may reject good quality food if superimposed on leftovers. Goats should not be deprived of food for periods longer than 24 hours.

The food available to goats should meet the requirements of maintenance, growth, pregnancy, lactation and fibre production, and any extra demands such as exercise or cold stress.

Health and productivity of goats are maximised when goats are fed forage diets of high digestibility which enable high levels of energy intake and contain sufficient nitrogen and trace minerals. Such diets enable goats to grow and lactate at high levels.

On pastures where no browse exists the recommended stocking rate for goats, measured in Dry Sheep Equivalents<sup>1</sup> (DSE) per hectare, is similar to that recommended for sheep.

Goats can be successfully grazed on pasture. Browse is not necessary. If browsing is available as a supplement to pasture, it may be possible to increase the stocking rate. However, the feed quality of scrub is often very low.

If only browsing is available, its height must be such that it is within reach of younger kids. Where only poor quality scrub is available, supplementary feed should be supplied.

In grazing situations conducive to high stocking rates (such as on improved perennial pastures), goats are vulnerable to internal parasites. To assist in the control of parasites, it is recommended that breeding goats are grazed at no more than 8 DSE per hectare.

Goats prefer a diet containing forage. In particular, where goats are confined to yards they should be supplied with forage daily in the form of good quality hay or browse, or pelleted feeds which contain at least 30% forage.

Body weight and condition of goats may fluctuate with seasonal feed availability, usually being lowest in late summer and autumn. Animals with a condition score of 1 (very lean) need to be supplementary fed (see Appendix 1).

Nutritional stress or sudden dietary changes (e.g., in the concentrate mixture, in the amount or type of green feed, or the introduction of grains) predispose goats to serious diseases (including enterotoxaemia, ruminal acidosis, and pregnancy toxaemia) and should be avoided. Feral goats require a conditioning period of 14 days to adjust from browsing scrub under range conditions to grazing pasture under intensive conditions, to allow them to change feeding habits and for their gut flora to change appropriately.

If goats are to be fed predominantly grain or concentrate mixture, it must be introduced slowly to the diet over a period of 2 to 3 weeks to prevent ruminal acidosis. It is recommended that the introduction be at no more than 50 g per head per day with increases of 50 g per head every second day.

Goats should be protected as far as possible from foods and materials deleterious to their health (e.g., many ornamental plants are toxic).

1.2 Water

Clean, potable water must be readily accessible to goats. The amount of water drunk depends upon the dry matter content of feed eaten and surface moisture available from rain or dew, body weight of goats and production level, especially of lactating goats. A goat in full lactation may consume up to 10 litres of water per day; this intake may double if the temperature exceeds 40°C.

Water quality (salinity, taste, temperature) can adversely affect intake. Goats may adapt to high salt levels (> 5000 mg/L) but generally prefer saline levels less than 2000 mg/L.

2. Drought

Drought may be defined as a severe rainfall shortage which leads to deficiency in water and/or feed supply for grazing goats. Drought is not the normal seasonal shortage of feed.

Goats being fed for survival should be inspected daily for health and vitality. Less thrifty goats may require segregation for special treatment and more frequent inspection.

Where provisions for health and vitality cannot be met, goats should be moved, agisted, sold or slaughtered humanely on site.

Drought-affected goats are highly susceptible to stress and require careful handling:

- (a) if they are unable to rise and walk, they must be destroyed humanely on site;
- (b) if they go down after limited exercise, they are not fit to travel, and should be fed to improve condition or, alternatively, be slaughtered humanely on site;
- (c) if they are still able to walk but in an emaciated condition, and for which supplementary feed or agistment is not available, they should be sent directly to a knackery, rendering works or abattoir, as close as possible to their on-farm location, or slaughtered humanely on site; they should not be consigned to saleyards.

Drought-affected goats should be protected against exposure to extremes of temperature and weather. Vehicles transporting drought-affected goats must provide adequate cooling in hot weather and protection against cold, wet conditions.

3. Protection from Climatic Extremes and Predation

Goats are sensitive to extremes of weather and all reasonable steps should be taken to minimise the effects of climatic extremes and other factors that produce either cold stress or heat stress.

Goats are vulnerable to cold stress, especially off-shears or when in low body condition, or during continuous rain when in full fleece. They require the provision of effective shelter or good natural shelter.

Steps should be taken to ensure that, as far as practicable, goats can be attended to promptly in the event of fire, flood, injury or disease.

Reasonable precautions should be taken to protect goats from predation. The use of electric fencing should be considered.

4. Intensive Goat Systems – Housing and Accommodation

Feedlots and feed pads should provide sufficient space for each goat to be able to stand, turn around, stretch, lie down and move to feed and water. The design, location and construction of feedlots and feed pads should take account of topography, climate, age and size of animal, space and feed requirements, and labour and management skills available.

Confined goats should have enough space to be able to lie down, stretch, stand up and to exercise. They should have access to shelter, food and water.

Tethering of goats must not be used as an ongoing form of confinement. It may be acceptable only as a short-term measure for a specific confinement need where conditions could otherwise cause injury, endanger the goats in some way, or permit them to stray.

If tethering is required it should be done in accordance with this code and also the Code of Practice for the Tethering of Animals. The agility and mobility of goats make them prone to entanglement when tethered; in addition, tethered goats are particularly vulnerable to attack by predators. For these reasons, tethering should be used only where there is adequate close supervision.

Goats should not be tethered by lengths less than 4 body lengths, unless selective veterinary therapy under shorter tether is prescribed, or for show, display or approved experimentation purposes. Collars, ropes, chains and similar materials used for tethering of goats should be constructed and used so as to avoid injury and pain.

Sheds or arks (mobile sheds) provided for goats should be of sufficient size to allow the animal to stand up, turn around and lie down.

In the case of housed goats, ventilation, whether mechanical or natural, should assist in the removal of environmental heat, moisture, dust, carbon dioxide and other noxious gases and airborne infectious organisms, and replace these with fresh air. This air should be distributed in a manner appropriate to the location of the stock and the design of the building.

Adequate fire fighting equipment should be available to control a fire in any goat housing shed, building or feedlot.

5. Goat Handling Facilities

Sheds, pens, yards, lanes, loading ramps, dips and areas where goats are forced to congregate should be so constructed and maintained and of such a size as to minimise the risk of injury, disease, overcrowding and trampling.

Floors or yards, sheds, pens and loading ramps should have a surface which is not slippery and which facilitates cleaning. Uneven or steeply sloping surfaces greatly increase the risk of falling because goats often display defensive reflexes when confronted with such situations and may make sudden erratic movements.

Goats should spend as little time as management practices allow confined in yards, so as to minimise chances of injury. Handling of goats in small groups, particularly kids and heavily pregnant does, will minimise injury in yards.

Special facilities should be available to permit adequate restraint of goats which require inspection or treatment because of illness or injury.

Goats should be caught and restrained with care. Horned goats may be restrained by holding the horn at its base, not at its tip, as this may cause the horn to break. If it is necessary to pick up goats it should be done by the body and not by their horns or hair.

6. Management Practices

6.1 General

Management procedures carried out on goats should be competently performed. Any injury, illness or distress observed should be promptly treated. Practices that cause pain should not be carried out on goats if painless and practical methods of husbandry can be adopted to achieve the same result. Hygienic precautions should be undertaken for all operations.

Restraint used on goats should be the minimum necessary to perform procedures efficiently.

Pregnant does are susceptible to stress-induced abortion. Animal husbandry practices should induce minimal stress, whether from extreme climatic conditions, mustering, handling, prolonged transportation or nutritional factors.

6.2 Health

Appropriate preventive treatment should be administered to goats for diseases that are common in a district or are likely to occur in a goat herd, in particular enterotoxaemia ('pulpy kidney') and tetanus.

Goats are particularly susceptible to gastro-intestinal parasites (including 'worms' and coccidiosis). A suitable control plan should be devised and followed. Paddocks used for grazing and yards where goats are confined should be managed in such a way that pick-up of contamination with parasites or other agents is minimised. Where anthelmintic resistance is suspected, faecal egg count reduction tests should be performed to determine suitable anthelmintic on an annual basis.

External parasites, such as lice, should be treated as early as possible.

Suitable methods of administration of vaccines and medication should be employed. Parenteral medicines, such as vaccines and other injectables, internal medication, such as vaccines and drenches, and external medication, such as dips and pour-on formulations, should be given in strict accordance with the manufacturers' instructions. Any medication which does not bear specific instructions for treatment of goats should be performed on the farm in a humane manner.

During the last month of pregnancy does are susceptible to pregnancy toxaemia ('twin kid disease'), which should be prevented by not allowing does to get overfat, by encouraging regular exercise and by avoiding nutritional stress. The condition should be detected and treated promptly if it occurs.

Difficult kiddings should be diagnosed promptly and does assisted only by a skilled and competent operator or by, or under the supervision of, a registered veterinary practitioner.

When does are producing more milk than is required by their kids, they should be hand-milked to relieve udder pressure.

Regular feet care is imperative to maintain soundness. Hoof trimming should be performed as necessary to remove over-growth of horn.

Goats are susceptible to deficiencies in trace elements, including iodine, selenium, copper or cobalt, when grazing deficient pastures. Appropriate preventive measures should be undertaken in known deficient areas.

6.3 Supervision

Frequency and level of inspection should be related to the likelihood of welfare problems of goats. Milch goats and goats kept under intensive management should be inspected, fed and watered daily. Goats grazing under more extensive conditions require regular supervision, according to density of stocking, availability of suitable feed, reliability of water supply, age and pregnancy status.

Agreements relating to leased land and agistment should specify who has duty of care under the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act 1986 for supervising stock.

6.4 Castration

Castration should be carried out on kids as early as management practices allow, preferably before 2 months of age. Surgical castration without the use of anaesthesia should be confined to bucks under two months of age.

6.5 Disbudding, Dehorning and Horn Trimming

Disbudding of kids should be by heat cautery only. The entire horn bud must be removed and the operation must be performed as soon as the bud can be located. Regrowth of horn occurs very readily, so kids should be checked two to three weeks after disbudding.

Disbudding by means of chemicals is not acceptable.

Dehorning (as distinct from disbudding) should only be performed under general anaesthesia or narcosis. Dehorning should only be performed by, or under the supervision of, a registered veterinary practitioner.

Horn trimming or the removal of sharp horn points is recommended to minimise injury to other goats. It should be performed so as to avoid bleeding and ensure that no sharp horn projection remain after the procedure.

6.6 Kidding

Kidding doe herds should be under adequate surveillance to ensure that does having difficulty are given attention and that other problems such as pregnancy toxaemia and predation are not occurring.

Access to a sheltered paddock is recommended for kidding doe herds if the risk of bad weather at kidding is high.

6.7 Milking Practices – Dairy Goats

Dairy goats in full lactation should not be left for more than 24 hours without relief by milking.

Careful management of the milking operation and proper milking machine function directly influence longevity of lactation, total production and prevalence of mastitis in dairy goats. Milking machines should be checked and, if necessary adjusted by a competent technician at least annually.

6.8 Shearing

Mohair goats should be shorn twice each year and cashmere goats may be shorn twice each year. The procedure should be performed by a competent operator and care should be taken to prevent injuries.

Shearing stress should be kept to a minimum by avoiding undue yarding and travelling procedures, avoiding exposure to adverse weather and by providing access to feed and water if animals are confined for more than 24 hours.

It is desirable that goats are provided with access to effective shelter or good natural cover after shearing. The critical period is the first six weeks post-shearing, depending on body condition and seasonal weather conditions.

7. Identification

Ear tagging, ear tattooing or microchipping are the preferred methods of identifying goats. Ear marking and ear notching are accepted methods of identification provided they are performed on goats less than 8 weeks of age.

Hot iron branding and freeze branding should not be performed.

8. Mustering, Driving, Yarding and Drafting

Goats should not be driven to the point of collapse. The use of goading devices and dogs for the handling and moving of goats should be limited to the minimum necessary to complete the procedures.

Electric goads should not be used on goats.

9. Humane Destruction of Goats

Goats should be humanely destroyed using the behind-the-horns method. The captive-bolt pistol (captive bolt penetrating stunner) or firearm should be directed to the skull behind the horns in the line with the animal's mouth (see Figure 1).

Kids may also be shot from the front, as for cattle, directing the shot at a point of intersection of lines taken from the base of each ear to the opposite eye (see Figure 2). This method is not suitable in mature goats, as the brain is located well back in the skull compared with other livestock.

Goats may be destroyed by overdose of anaesthetic under veterinary supervision.

Other methods of killing are unacceptable except under extreme conditions in which commonsense and a genuine concern for animal and human welfare should prevail.

CODE OF PRACTICE FOR THE WELFARE OF ANIMALS AT SALEYARDS (VICTORIA)

Introduction

This code of practice is intended as a guide to all stock handlers involved in the management of animals of various species at saleyards, including truck drivers, stockmen, livestock agency staff, stock inspectors, producers, saleyard managers and their staff.

The aim of establishing this code is to minimise stress to all livestock by encouraging efficient and considerate treatment and handling. The code covers aspects of unloading, pre- and post-sale handling, the provision of feed, water, shelter and general care of livestock at saleyards. Recommendations are also given for the care, treatment and humane emergency slaughter of sick, injured or 'downer' animals.

Procedures at saleyards may subject animals to a variety of stressful situations such as:

- yarding and handling;
- restricted access to food and/or water;
- exposure to extremes of weather;
- unfamiliar surroundings, noises and sensation;
- mixing with unfamiliar animals;
- exposure to infectious diseases.

Each species of animal needs to be handled differently and this code describes some methods of handling that can assist in minimising stress.

It is recommended that animals travelling long distances be given sufficient time after arrival at the saleyard to feed, water and rest in accord with any pre-sale curfew restrictions. Allowing for any rest period required, animals should be held in saleyards for as short a period as possible.

1. General

The people managing and handling the animals must be sensitive to the basic needs of the individual animal and be aware of any travel stress that livestock at saleyards may be suffering. The skills for managing and handling animals include the ability to:

- work so that stress to animals is minimised;
- use the natural behaviour of animals;
- recognise early signs of stress and disease and to initiate prompt and appropriate preventative or remedial action.

Good stockpersons are flexible in their approach to livestock management and handling and adapt to the needs of differing animals and circumstances.

Saleyards should be sited away from fire- and flood-prone areas and, as far as is practical, away from residential areas. They should be constructed and maintained in accordance with appropriate animal welfare and animal behavioural considerations. The responsibility for the maintenance and functioning of the saleyards should be clearly defined and publicised.

Prior advice of intention to consign stock, especially large numbers of stock, to saleyards is desirable to avoid overstocking of facilities.

Diseased, sick, injured or drought-weakened stock should not be consigned to, or processed through, saleyards.

2. Management Personnel*2.1 Managers, Superintendents or Saleyard Supervisors

Managers, superintendents or saleyard supervisors of saleyard complexes have overall responsibility for the welfare, care and handling of animals at saleyards. They are in charge of the day-to-day activities at the saleyards, either directly through the supervision of the actions of saleyard staff or indirectly through the livestock agents and contract stockhandlers. They should ensure that high standards are maintained in relation to:

- Stock handling by all handlers at the saleyards;
- Appointment of staff competent in stockmanship;
- Training and supervision of staff;
- Feeding, watering and regular inspection of all animals when not in the care of owners or the owners' appointed agents;
- Obtaining prompt veterinary attention for diseased, sick or injured animals and arranging removal of injured animals and/or carcasses from the yards. Subject to firearm legislation, a rifle and/or captive-bolt pistol should be kept at the yards and be readily accessible for use for emergency slaughter;
- Appointment of stockmen responsible for loading, unloading and receiving of animals when the owner or the owner's appointed agent is not present;
- Allocation of appropriate holding, drafting, selling and post-sale pens;
- Maintenance of cleanliness and upkeep of the yard structures, building and facilities for the handling and housing of animals.

2.2 Stockmen and/or Animal Attendants

The importance of competent stockmanship to the welfare of livestock cannot be overemphasised. The ability to recognise the early signs of distress and injury in animals is an important skill which enables prompt remedial action to be taken. Competent persons are required to exhibit patience, commonsense and responsibility in dealing with animals. Inexperienced persons should not be given tasks requiring particular skills or be required to work alone at any time when animals are being handled. Inexperienced staff should be given training in stock handling by competent and skilled staff. Such training should emphasise the behavioural characteristics of stock.

Under no circumstances should cruelty or ill-treatment of animals be tolerated.

3. Stock Handling Facilities

3.1 Ramp Design and Construction

Loading and handling facilities should be constructed so that they do not cause injury to animals. Where possible, the vehicular approach to the ramp should have a slight fall backwards to enable vehicles to be rolled into position gently. A line should be painted on the road surface to assist this approach.

Ramps should be illuminated from directly above to encourage better livestock movement, and for the safety of operators.

The internal walls of ramps should be sheeted, smooth and high enough so that animals cannot be disturbed by activities outside the ramp and will not injure themselves. Safety exits must be provided for operator use on cattle ramps. In addition, a non-protruding step rail should be provided to allow handlers to quickly exit the loading ramp.

Provision of a walkway for use by handlers on the outside of the ramp will facilitate stock movement and is essential on sheeted ramps. Access into the ramp and hence the vehicle from this walkway is also desirable to facilitate the closure of transport pens.

The walkway should be constructed of a non-slip material, have adequate handrails and kick boards and comply with the Australian Standard – AS1657-1992, 'Fixed platforms, walkways, stairways and ladders – Design, construction and installation'.

Where ramps are adjustable, appropriate safety locking devices must be installed with clear instructions as to how they are to be used. These safety locking devices should be automatic in operation and have vertical increments of no more than 100 mm.

3.2 Design Considerations for Species

3.2.1 Cattle and Horses

Loading ramps should be wide enough to accommodate the hip width of mature animals. Excessive width may obstruct loading. An internal width of 760 mm will be sufficient for most animals.

Ramps should be constructed appropriate to the species of stock and transports used. A flat platform at the top of the ramp should be level with the deck being unloaded and should be not less than 1.5 metres in length to assist loading and unloading. Suggested ramp heights are 1100–1200 mm from the ground for single deck or bottom deck, and 2800–2900 mm for top deck.

A slope of not more than 1 in 3 (about 20 degrees) is recommended for permanently installed ramps. The surface should be made of non-slip material with either cross cleats, 40-50 mm wide spaced at 300 mm centres or, if concrete, a suitable cross-grooved pattern of steps to provide good footing when the ramp is wet. Livestock prefer to walk up steps rather than inclines. Recommended dimensions are 450 mm treads and 100 mm rises.

Overhead bars on ramps used for horses should be of sufficient height to prevent head injuries to rearing horses.

3.2.2 Pigs Lambs, Sheep, Goats and Calves

Ramps should be 900 mm wide for all species except pigs, where 900–1000 mm is recommended to accommodate two pigs side by side and prevent jamming.

On fixed ramps, a flat area of platform at least 1 metre in length is recommended at truck height. Ramp steps with 250 mm of treads and 50 mm rises or cross cleats 25 mm wide and high at 200 mm centres are recommended.

3.3 Holding Paddocks and Yards

Sufficient yards should be provided to avoid mixing different consignments of animals and fences should be secure to prevent their escape.

Projections likely to cause injury should be completely eliminated from all fences and gates. Fences should be high enough to prevent animals mixing or escaping. Gates should be wide enough to allow easy flow of animals without injury. A minimum width of 2500 mm per gate is recommended.

An added safeguard to the welfare of stock held overnight is provided by dog-proof perimeter fencing. This is especially desirable for saleyards that are used for sheep or calves and situated near residential areas.

The provision of shade or cooling systems in hot climates and shelter from excessive cold for animals in holding facilities is desirable, recognising practical and economic limitations. Animals should be protected from extremes of weather.

3.4 Laneways and Races

Laneways and fences should be sheeted where appropriate to avoid animals being disturbed by outside activities and to direct them along desired pathways. Properly designed curved sheeted races and forcing yards should be provided to facilitate the movement of animals.

It is undesirable for animals to be kept on concrete for prolonged periods. Concrete floors should have non-slip surfaces. Walkways for handlers and buyers separate to laneways for livestock, are recommended, especially for large cattle-selling centres. Overhead walkways should be constructed to minimise the casting of shadows in live stock laneways.

Facilities and procedures should aim to minimise dust and eliminate boggy conditions.

Drains should be constructed to avoid injury to animals and to ensure efficient drainage from pens and holding areas and sited so as not to impede the movement of animals.

A veterinary inspection crush should be available for individual treatment when necessary.

3.5 Drafting

Drafting facilities that utilise the natural tendency of livestock to follow one another are recommended. For drafting cattle, 360° overhead operated facilities are preferred.

Lighting should be installed to avoid, as far as possible, shadows and dark areas across laneways and in drafting yards, particularly where animals are drafted at night. Animals need to see a clear path in front of them. Noise levels should be kept to a minimum.

When drafting livestock, operators should allow time for the animals to see where they are required to move and to give them room to move. Rushing animals only confuses them, and causes further stress, hindering the drafting operation.

3.6 Selling Pens and Buyers Pens

Selling pens should allow for adequate viewing of stock by buyers. For cattle, new yards should allow for entry and exit gates from the pen to the cattle laneway, the gates being at least 2400 mm in length and hinged to enable the gate to contact the other side of the lane. The height of panelling should be 1650 mm for cattle. Generally the yard space required for livestock is that area which allows the stock to move freely around the pen and buyers to make an assessment.

The density of cattle in selling pens should allow for all cattle to have access to water.

Appropriate stocking densities for sheep should take into account the age, condition, wool length and size of the sheep.

Lower densities should be used where there are calves or lambs at foot.

Different classes of stock should be maintained separately as far as practical.

Individual pens should be provided for the sale of bulls.

3.7 Watering Facilities

Watering facilities should be provided in all receival yards and in any other yards or pens where animals may be held for more than 12 hours. Facilities should be provided to ensure that the following groups have access to cool clean drinking water:

- (a) all animals that have been travelling for more than 12 hours or deprived of water for a total period of more than 12 hours;
- (b) all animals held overnight; and
- (c) all animals held in yards for more than 12 hours or lesser periods during hot weather.

Troughs should be constructed and located to minimise injury to animals and minimise fouling with faeces. They should be capable of being easily cleaned and should be cleaned before each sale.

Automatic equipment should be checked frequently to ensure that it is functioning. Water pressure should be adequate to keep water containers full at all times.

Water troughs or bowls can be situated on the boundary of two pens.

Small troughs are preferable to large troughs as they are more hygienic, provide fresher water and are less likely to injure or hinder stock. Troughs should not be less than 600 mm long, 300 mm wide and 300 mm in depth, and there should be enough troughs to allow 15 mm of trough length per sheep and 30 mm per cattle beast in receival, delivery and spelling yards.

Nipple drinkers and bowls should not be used as the sole source of water for cattle or sheep.

In earth yards, concrete aprons or gravel 1000 mm wide should be provided around the watering points.

3.8 Feeding at Saleyards

Also refer to Section 5 of this Code: Special Considerations of Species

As a general rule animals should not be without food for more than 24 hours including the time spent travelling and yarding. For immature animals the intervals between feeds should be considerably shorter.

The owner or agent is responsible for the feeding of livestock where this is necessary. Arrangements for feeding and water should be made with the person in charge of the saleyard in the absence of the owner and agent.

3.8.1 Bobby Calves

Bobby calves must not be held longer than 10 hours without being fed an appropriate liquid food.

3.9 Maintenance

Yards, gates and equipment should be maintained in good repair. Boggy areas should be filled with gravel if more permanent means of eliminating such conditions cannot be undertaken.

3.10 Truck Washing Facilities

Truck cleaning facilities, i.e., sufficient water under high pressure and suitable drainage, should be provided at all saleyards.

4. Loading and Unloading

4.1 Welfare Advantages of Efficient Handling

Animals should be unloaded as soon as practicable after arrival and in a manner that does not cause them injury. If they are allowed to walk quietly off the rail wagon or vehicle, injuries can be avoided.

Trucks should be correctly aligned with the ramp so that no gaps exist. Flaps or adjustable bumper rails should be used to avoid such gaps. Proper alignment with the race will ensure the smooth movement of animals and minimise the risk of injury and bruising.

Lighting should be provided for unloading at night. Lighting should be carefully positioned to give even light over ramps, races, yards and pens to avoid glare and to minimise shadows.

Because livestock tend to follow each other, sufficient area should be provided in forcing/receival yards during loading and unloading to allow them to move easily towards the target area.

A minimum forcing yard area of 30 m<sup>2</sup> is recommended for large stock for loading a 12 m semi-trailer. A minimum forcing yard of 20 m<sup>2</sup> is recommended for sheep. A forcing yard with one straight and/or sheeted side can help to facilitate loading.

4.2 Methods of Assisting the Handling of Animals

Electric prods should be powered only by battery or hand dynamo and must not be more powerful than necessary. Their use must be restricted to the absolute minimum. The continual prodding of animals which have little or no room to move must not occur.

'Flappers' (a length of cane with a short strap of leather or canvas approximately 300 mm in length attached) or 'metallic rattles', used sparingly, will encourage movement of animals. Sticks, lengths of heavy plastic, metal piping or heavy leather belts must not be used on stock.

Well-trained dogs can assist in loading, unloading and moving sheep. In confined areas they cause stress to sheep. Their use should be strictly limited to that necessary to complete the task. The use of dogs in lieu of appropriate yard design is not supported. Dogs must be effectively prevented from biting. Dogs must also be supervised at all times and be secured when not working.

Dogs must not be used to work pigs.

The unloading area should be restricted to authorised persons only. Unloading should be supervised by experienced stockmen.

4.3 Separation of Animals during Holding

Animals of different species should not be mixed, in particular calves or sheep with pigs. Within species, unless they arrived in one consignment from a single point of origin, the following categories should be kept separated:

- (a) females with suckling offspring;
- (b) females known to be in advanced pregnancy;
- (c) mature entire males;
- (d) unfamiliar groups of pigs.

It is also desirable, whenever possible, to hold separately:

- (a) hornless and horned animals;
- (b) animals of significantly different sizes.

4.4 Unloading of Injured Animals

Healthy animals should be unloaded first, as quietly as possible, to minimise further injury to injured animals. Injured animals should be attended to without delay.

Severely injured animals should be humanely killed without delay. If a veterinarian is unavailable, this should be done by, or at the direction of, the person in charge of the saleyards. It is unacceptable to delay killing severely injured animals for any length of time. If in the judgement of a veterinarian or stock inspector an injury is minor and is not causing undue pain and/or distress, affected animals should be promptly segregated and treated.

Animals requiring emergency slaughter should be shot or stunned and bled without moving them further than necessary to effect euthanasia. It may be necessary to carry out emergency slaughter on the transport vehicle.

The practice of winching, or dragging by any means, living injured animals from transport vehicles is unacceptable. Unloading injured and moribund animals from trucks by tying them to a fixed object, such as a tree or ramp, and driving the transport vehicle away is equally condemned. Live animals should not be lifted by the head, horns, wool or legs.

The place for humane slaughter should be safe for the operator and persons nearby and should be able to be cleaned afterwards.

5. Special Considerations of Species

5.1 Pigs

Pigs are more susceptible to heat stress and sunburn than other livestock. They should not be exposed to long periods of direct sunlight or extremes of temperature. Panting is a sign of heat stress. Spray facilities should be provided for cooling animals.

Pigs should be unloaded immediately on arrival at the saleyard unless facilities exist for vehicles to park in a roofed area with spray facilities. All procedures involving pigs including holding and selling should be conducted under a roofed area.

Pig holding pens should have no-slip floors impervious to moisture, and should have walls constructed so that pigs cannot fight with unfamiliar pigs in adjoining pens. Cool, drinkable water should be provided at all times in holding pens. If provided by drinkers, allocation, design and flow rates should be such that water requirements of different classes of pig are met with undue effort, taking into account normal expected wastage rates. If water troughs are provided they should be firmly fixed and the sides high enough to prevent fouling with faeces. Water troughs should have a minimum of 100 mm of trough length per pig. Where drinking bowls are used, at least one bowl should be provided for each 15 pigs. They should be regularly inspected and cleaned. Holding pens should have not less than 0.47 m<sup>2</sup> per pig, or space as required by State legislation.

5.2 Unweaned Calves (bobby calves)

It is desirable to present bobby calves for sale that are bright, alert, strong, vigorous, able to stand on their own, capable of being transported and at least 4 days old. Calves which fail to meet these requirements must not be taken to saleyards. In bobby calves, the junction of the umbilical cord and skin must be dry and the cord shrivelled.

Vehicles containing calves must be unloaded as quickly as possible on arrival at saleyards.

The minimum recommended liveweight for bobby calves being sold is 23kg at the point of sale; obviously immature, dopey and listless calves should not be presented for sale.

Sick or injured calves are to be given appropriate treatment or be humanely destroyed. They are not to be presented for sale or transport or slaughter.

Handling of calves should be carried out in a manner which will avoid injury or unnecessary suffering. Calves are not to be kicked, beaten, pulled, thrown or 'dumped' or prodded with any sharp instrument. The use of electrical goading devices or dogs when handling, driving, drafting, weighing, loading or unloading is not an acceptable practice.

It is desirable to provide a roofed area to protect calves from the sun. A sealed no-slip floor must also be provided. This floor must be hosed clean after each sale to minimise the risk of spread of disease.

Calves are highly susceptible to scours and dehydration. They must be removed from saleyards as quickly as possible following sale. Bobby calves must not be held longer than 10 hours without being fed an appropriate liquid food.

5.3 Unweaned Lambs and Kids

Lambs or kids under one month of age must be accompanied by their dams when taken to saleyards.

5.4 Animals in Advanced Pregnancy

Whilst it is not recommended that animals in advanced pregnancy be consigned to or sold through saleyards, it is recognised that this at times unavoidably occurs. Such animals should be given special treatment in regard to handling, holding times and provision of feed and water.

6. Industrial Disputes at Abattoirs

Once management is advised of an impending dispute at abattoirs supplied by the saleyard, efforts should be made to limit further consignments of stock to that saleyard. It should be the responsibility of the person in charge of the saleyard to contract stock agents and media (radio and television) so that farmers are informed of the need to keep their stock on the farms until the dispute is resolved.

Where stock are already at the saleyard, the person in charge should endeavour to arrange an 'emergency kill' with a slaughtering establishment. If this is not possible, adequate feed and water must be provided for all livestock held at the yard during the dispute.

If arrangements cannot be made for the emergency slaughter of bobby calves at a registered establishment, they should be humanely killed at the yard without delay if an alternative satisfactory method of care cannot be arranged for them.

7. Humane Destruction of Stock

Previous sections of this code have drawn attention to those circumstances in which stock may need to be humanely destroyed, e.g. following serious illness or injury.

Whilst this task is aesthetically unpleasant to most people, the method of slaughter should be effective and cause sudden and painless death for the animal. It is equally important that the animal be handled quietly beforehand to ensure it is not unnecessarily distressed or alarmed.

The following recommended methods are those which are considered the most suitable at saleyards.

7.1 Use of Firearms

The most efficient and widely available method of humanely destroying livestock is a gunshot to the brain from close range. There may, however, be legal restrictions on the use of firearms in public places. Under those circumstances, assistance should be sought from veterinary practitioners, the RSPCA, the Police or Department of Natural Resources and Environment Inspectors of Stock.

The following aspects of firearms safety should be borne in mind:

- a .22 calibre rifle or a .32 calibre humane killer pistol is adequate for humane destruction of most animals;
- any use of firearms is potentially hazardous;
- persons other than the marksman and a handler for the animal should be cleared from the area or should stand well behind the marksman;
- never fire while the animal is moving its head; wait patiently for a quiet interval before firing;
- to provide maximum impact and the least possibility of misdirection, the range should be as short as circumstances permit;
- whilst the humane killer pistol and captive-bolt pistol are designed to be pressed firmly on the head prior to being discharged, it is not safe to do this with a standard rifle or pistol.

7.2 Use of the Captive-Bolt Pistol

An alternative to the firearm is a captive-bolt pistol (captive-bolt penetrating stunner) which is safer since a blank cartridge is used. The operator does not have to be a marksman as the instrument's muzzle is firmly pressed against the skull before firing. It must, however, be assumed that the animal has only been stunned and a follow-up method of ensuring death, such as bleeding out, is required.

Blank cartridges for the captive-bolt pistol are colour-coded according to the amount of charge they contain. For best results, the manufacturer's recommendations should be followed on the most appropriate blank cartridge for different farm animals. Regular maintenance of the captive-bolt pistol is essential for efficient stunning.

7.3 Special Requirements of Stock

7.3.1 Horses

A head collar or bridle should be put on the animal to enable it to be quietly restrained by an assistant who must stand out of the line of fire. Restless animals should be blindfolded.

- Frontal method: the captive-bolt pistol or firearm should be directed at the point of intersection of diagonal lines taken from the base of each ear to the opposite eye. The bullet should be directed horizontally to ensure the brain is damaged (see Figure 1).
- Temporal method: only suitable for firearms; the horse is shot from the side so that the bullet enters the skull midway between the eye and the base of the ear on the same side of the head. The bullet should be directed horizontally.
- Only a suitably designed captive-bolt pistol should be used to destroy horses. The manufacturer's instructions must be followed for best results. Major blood vessels of the neck should be severed as soon as possible, taking care to avoid injury caused by the animal's involuntary movements.

a indicates recommended position for temporal method (suitable for firearm only).
b indicates recommended position for frontal method (suitable for firearm or captive-bolt pistol).

7.3.2 Cattle

- Frontal method: the captive-bolt pistol or firearm should be directed at the point of intersection of lines taken from the base of each ear to the opposite eye (see Figure 2).
- Temporal method: only suitable for firearms. The animal is shot from the side so that the bullet enters the skull midway between the eye and the base of the ear on the same side of the head. The bullet should be directed horizontally.

When the animal has been stunned using a captive-bolt pistol, it should be bled out as soon as it collapses by severing the major vessels of the neck. To avoid injury due to the animal's involuntary leg movements, the operator should stand behind the neck.

a indicates recommended position for temporal method (suitable for firearm only)

b indicates recommended position for frontal method (suitable for firearm or captive-bolt pistol).

7.3.3 Sheep

Hornless sheep and rams:

- The firearm or captive-bolt pistol should be placed just behind the poll and aimed in the direction of the animal's muzzle (position a Figure 3); or
- The firearm should be aimed from the side of the head at a point midway between the eye and the base of the ear (position b Figure 3); or
- The captive-bolt pistol should be placed on top of the head and fired vertically downwards (position c Figure 3).

Horned sheep and rams:

- The firearm is aimed at a point in the middle of the face just above the level of the eyes and aimed along the neck (position a Figure 4); or
- The captive-bolt pistol should be placed behind the poll and aimed in the direction of the animal's muzzle (position b Figure 4).

Fig. 3

7.3.4 Pigs

- Frontal method: the captive-bolt pistol or firearm should be directed at a point about midway across the forehead and (for adult pigs) about 2 cm above the level of the eyes (Figure 5). When using a firearm, aim horizontally into the skull.
- Temporal method: only suitable for firearms. The pig is shot from the side of the head so that the bullet enters the skull at a point midway between the eye and the base of the ear on the same side of the head. The bullet should be directed horizontally into the skull. This method is preferred for adult pigs due to the heavier bone structure of the front of the skull.

 a indicates recommended position for temporal method (suitable for firearm only).
 b indicates recommended position for frontal method (suitable for firearm or captive-bolt pistol).

7.3.5 Goats

Using either a captive-bolt pistol or firearm, direct the instrument to the skull behind the horns as shown by the point of the arrow in Figure 6. Aim the firearm in line with animal's mouth, and take care that no one is in the line of fire.

Kids may also be shot from the front as for cattle. However, this method is not suitable for mature goats as the brain is located well back in the skull compared to other livestock.

CODE OF ACCEPTED FARMING PRACTICE FOR THE WELFARE OF SHEEP (VICTORIA)
 (REVISION NUMBER 1)

Introduction

This code is intended as a guide for all people who handle and manage sheep. The aim of establishing this code is to achieve humane husbandry in all types of sheep enterprises. Assistance and specific advice on management and disease control in sheep should be obtained from qualified advisers, whose services are available through government and private agencies.

Sheep are kept in situations which vary from extensive grazing to close confinement and housing. Whatever the form of husbandry, owners, agents, managers and stockpersons have a moral responsibility and a clearly defined legal responsibility to care for the welfare of animals under their control.

The crucial importance of sound animal husbandry principles cannot be over-emphasised in the course of meeting the welfare requirements of animals. This code outlines sound sheep husbandry practices, but is not prescriptive because good stockhandlers need to be flexible in their approach to caring for their animals.

Among the most important factors affecting welfare in a flock are the behaviour and attitude of the manager. Important skills of the competent manager and stockpersons include the ability to anticipate situations in which the welfare of the animals may be at risk and to recognise early signs of distress or ill-health in animals, so that appropriate preventive or early remedial action may be taken.

The basic requirements for the welfare of sheep are:

- (a) a level of nutrition adequate to sustain good health and vigour;
- (b) access to sufficient water of suitable quality to meet physiological needs;
- (c) social contact with other sheep; but with sufficient space to stand, to lie down and stretch their limbs;
- (d) protection from predation;
- (e) protection from pain, injury and disease;
- (f) protection from extremes of weather which may be life threatening;
- (g) provision of reasonable precautions against the effects of natural disasters, e.g. firebreaks and fodder storage;
- (h) handling facilities which under normal usage do not cause injury and which minimise stress to the sheep.

1. Food and Water

1.1 Food

Sheep should have available a diet which is nutritionally adequate to maintain health and meet the appropriate physiological requirements for growth, pregnancy, lactation and to withstand cold exposure. Where provisions for health and vitality cannot be met, sheep should be moved, agisted, sold or slaughtered on site.

In all systems of management, continual assessment should be made of the needs of the sheep in relation to the amount, quality and continuity of feed supply.

Sheep should be excluded, as far as possible, from toxic plants and other substances suspected of being deleterious to their health.

1.2 Water

Sheep must have access to water; regular assessment should be made of the quality and quantity of water supply. Watering points should be of sufficient capacity and allow safe access.

Mechanical equipment controlling the delivery of water (including windmills and bores) should be inspected regularly, and frequently in hot weather, and kept in good working order.

The quality of water provided should be adequate to maintain sheep health. Drinking water which contains potentially toxic levels of salts, or other deleterious substances, should be monitored and managed to minimise deleterious effects.

Where sufficient good quality water to maintain health cannot be provided, the sheep should be moved to other areas where an adequate supply is available. Alternatively, they should be sold or humanely slaughtered on site. As a guide, sheep should not be deprived of water for more than 36 hours. This period must be reduced in the event of hot weather.

2. Drought

Drought is defined as severe food and/or water shortage following prolonged periods of abnormally low rainfall. It is not a normal seasonal decline in the quantity and quality of food available.

Owners and their advisers, should consider animal welfare as a major issue in their development of drought relief strategies. Property strategies for drought management should be prepared well in advance and progressively implemented. Owners and advisers with limited or no previous experience of drought management should seek advice from qualified advisers. Where drought feeding is the preferred option, it should be started before paddock feed runs out.

Sheep being fed for survival should be observed carefully at feeding times. Weak animals may require segregation for special treatment.

Sheep must not be allowed to starve to death. Where minimal water and food requirements cannot be met, they should be agisted, sent for slaughter or humanely destroyed on the property. Drought affected sheep are highly susceptible to stress and require careful handling:

- (a) if they are unable to rise and walk they should be humanely destroyed on site;
- (b) if they go down after limited exercise, they are not fit to travel and should be humanely destroyed on the property;
- (c) if they are still able to walk they should be agisted or sent directly to the nearest slaughtering plant; they should not be consigned through saleyards.

3. *Protection from Climatic Extremes, Natural Disasters and Predation

All reasonable precautions should be taken to minimise the effects of weather that produce either cold stress or heat stress in sheep. Freshly shorn sheep and newborn lambs are particularly susceptible. Windbreaks to reduce the effects of cold may be provided in the form of scrub or planted trees, long grass or artificial shelter.

Sheep should be attended to promptly in the event of fire, flood, injury or disease.

Where predation is known to occur, reasonable precautions should be taken.

3.1 Tethering

Sheep should not be tethered in conditions where they are vulnerable to heatwaves, severe cold, driving rain or predators and should not be tethered without adequate access to shelter, food and water at all times. (Additional information about tethering is available in the Code of Practice for the Tethering of Animals.)

Tethering sites should be well grassed to provide adequate grazing at all times and tethering sites should be changed at least every 24 hours.

Sheep under six months of age should not be tethered.

4. *Protection from Disease

Sick, injured or diseased sheep should be given prompt and appropriate treatment or be humanely slaughtered (see Appendix 2). Advice should be sought from qualified advisers.

Appropriate preventative measures should be used for sheep for diseases that are common in a district or are likely to occur in a flock.

Medication, including vaccines, drenches and dips, should be administered in strict accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.

5. *Feedlots

Feedlotting is a situation where sheep are kept in outdoor yards or housed in sheds and hand fed for various purposes, including live export, meat lamb production or fine wool production.

The design, location and construction of a feedlot should take account of topography, climate, age and size of animals to be kept there, space and feed requirements, and labour and management skills available. Adequate provision should be made for cleaning, drainage and waste disposal.

All sheep should have adequate access to feeding and watering facilities, which should be maintained in good repair and clean condition.

Special requirements for selection, health, environment, floor space and food and water are included in Appendix 1: Special requirements in intensive sheep systems.

6. *Sheep Handling Facilities

Well-designed sheep handling facilities, and the ease with which animals flow through them, have important implications for the welfare of the sheep. When new sheep yards are to be constructed, or existing yards modified, expert advice should be sought.

Sheds and yards should be constructed and maintained to minimise the risk of injury and disease.

Passageways, races, entrances and exits should be designed to take advantage of the behaviour patterns of sheep.

The floors of sheds and yards should have surfaces that minimise the risk of injury and disease and allow sheep to stand and walk normally.

Where sheep are held in yards for extended periods, their requirements for food and water should be met.

7. Supervision

Owners and their advisers, including absentee owners and their advisers, should ensure that sheep are inspected sufficiently often to maintain them in sound and healthy condition. The frequency and thoroughness of inspection should be related to the likelihood of risk to the welfare of the sheep in relation to food, water, protection against natural disasters and likelihood of diseases, e.g. flystrike.

Housed sheep should be checked by an experienced stockperson at least once each day for signs of injury, changes in food and water intake, illness or distress.

Sheep grazing under more extensive conditions require variable supervision according to the density of stocking, availability of suitable feed, reliability of water supply, age, pregnancy status, climatic conditions and management practices.

8. Management Practices

8.1 General

A large number of husbandry/management practices is required in any sheep farming enterprise. The consequences of not performing certain husbandry procedures may result in far more pain and distress to the animal than the procedure itself, when it is performed quickly and competently.

Restraint used on sheep should be the minimum necessary to efficiently carry out the required procedures.

Practices that cause pain should be applied in such a way as to minimise pain and should not be carried out if practical alternatives can be used to achieve the same results.

Management procedures carried out on sheep should be performed by competent persons or under the direct supervision of an experienced operator.

Relevant hygienic precautions should be undertaken.

8.2 Handling and Movement

There are times when sheep need to be handled for close inspection or shifted to another place. It is essential that the catcher handle the sheep gently to reduce stress to individual sheep and to other sheep nearby.

If drafting facilities are not available, sheep may be caught, but not pulled, by one leg. If carrying is necessary, they should not be lifted by the wool.

Sheep should be moved quietly through yards with the minimum forcing by dog or person. Care should be taken with gates to avoid injury to sheep.

Precautions should be taken to prevent smothering of closely yarded sheep. Lambs and weaners are at particular risk.

The use of dogs and goading devices for handling sheep should be limited to the minimum needed to complete the procedures. Dogs should be effectively prevented from biting.

8.3 Shearing

It is normal practice to shear sheep annually. Additional limited shearing in the form of crutching, wiggling and ringing may be required at other times of the year to reduce the risk of fly strike, and to minimise impairment of vision, and the incidence of stained wool.

Because shearing is stressful, managers should attempt to avoid undue handling and exposure to adverse weather. Sheep should be returned to food and water as soon as possible after shearing.

Where circumstances indicate, shearing cuts should be treated to prevent infection and fly strike.

8.4 Dipping

Dips or showers should be constructed, maintained and operated in a manner that minimises injury, disease and stress to sheep.

8.5 Paring of Feet

Sheep which have poor hoof conformation, or are habitually on soft ground, may require regular foot paring.

Sheep affected with foot disease may need to have diseased tissue pared away by a sharp instrument. The paring should be kept to the minimum necessary to remove affected tissue and should not result in bleeding or severe lameness.

Paring may not be indicated in sheep with feet affected by foot abscess.

Control or eradication procedures should be adopted if evidence of foot rot occurs.

8.6 Horn Trimming

The horns of rams, stags and some wethers may need to be cut back to avoid injury from an ingrowing horn or to other sheep and to allow free movement through handling races. The amount of horn removed should be limited to avoid damage to soft horn tissue and associated bleeding.

Complete permanent dehorning should only be undertaken under general anaesthesia.

8.7 Lambing

Ewe flocks lambing under grazing conditions should be disturbed as little as possible. However, the flocks should be under adequate surveillance to ensure that ewes having difficulty are given attention and to ensure that other problems, such as pregnancy toxaemia and predation, are not occurring.

Access to a sheltered paddock is recommended for lambing ewe flocks, if the risk of bad weather at lambing is high. Where orphan and stray lambs can be identified they should either be humanely killed or given attention.

8.8 Identification

When it is necessary to mark sheep for permanent identification, it can be done by tattooing, tagging, notching or hole punching the ear. Electronic methods may also be acceptable.

In horned sheep, the horn may be hot branded provided care is taken to ensure that the branding does not predispose the animal to infection and does not burn sensitive tissue.

9. Husbandry Procedures – Surgical

9.1 General

Surgical procedures may cause pain and stress, which can be reduced with appropriate restraint and competent operators.

Strict attention should be paid to the suitability of the work area in which the operation is to be performed, the catching facilities and the type and amount of restraint. Temporary yards in well-grassed areas can be useful to minimise wound contamination with dirt, dust and faeces and to reduce the additional stress imposed by travelling.

Instruments should be adequately maintained and sterilised prior to use. Proper hygiene should be practised and animals given adequate after-care.

Stock managers should be trained in all surgical husbandry procedures or experienced operators should be employed.

When tetanus is known to be a risk, a vaccination programme against tetanus should be considered to prevent the risk associated with surgical procedures.

9.2 Ear Marking

Ear marking instruments should be sharp, with the cutting edges undamaged, so as to prevent tearing of the ear.

Ear tagging can cause some tearing of the ear if not conducted properly; careful technique will avoid this.

9.3 Tail Docking

Tail docking is a recommended practice for blowfly control. It should be performed on lambs as early as management practices will allow, preferably between 2 and 12 weeks. Animals over 6 months require an anaesthetic.

Acceptable methods of tail docking, without anaesthesia, are: cutting with a sharp knife; applying rubber rings according to the manufacturer's recommendation; or using a gas flame heated scaring iron according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

The docked tail should be just long enough to cover the vulva in female sheep and be of similar length in the male.

9.4 Castration

Castration may be unnecessary if all lambs are to be marketed for slaughter prior to puberty, which generally occurs at an age of 3–6 months.

Where castration is required, it should be performed on lambs as early as management practices will allow, preferably before 12 weeks. Animals older than 6 months require anaesthetic.

Acceptable methods of castrating male lambs without anaesthesia are by:

- (a) cutting: the lamb should be properly restrained and the knife (cutting instrument) should be kept clean and sharp; good post-operative drainage of the wound is required;
- (b) applying rubber rings according to the manufacturer's recommendation.

9.5 Mules Operation

Mulesing is a surgical procedure that removes wool-bearing skin from the breech area and the tail of sheep. During healing, cut areas of skin pull together stretching the bare skin around the anus and vulva to produce a barer, less wrinkly breech, and the bare skin under the tail stretches out to the (normally docked) end of the tail.

In conjunction with correct tail length, mulesing provides a high degree of lifetime protection against fly strike in the breech area. Until a more acceptable solution is found, mulesing is recommended in circumstances where breech strike is probable.

The operation is a precise surgical procedure and should only be undertaken by skilled, competent and experienced operators on appropriately restrained lambs. Attention to hygiene and having sharp instruments are essential to avoid delay in healing wounds. Mulesing shears should be maintained razor sharp while in use and should be disinfected before use on each lamb.

The 'modified' mules operation is preferred to the 'radical' mules operation, which should not be performed. Information should be sought from the local office of DNRE on the most effective technique in a particular area. Proper technique involves:

- the incision and removal of skin only (i.e., no penetration of the underlying muscle fascia);
- non-removal of any bare (non-woolly) skin; and
- correct tail length (see s. 9.3).

Whenever possible, avoid mulesing while blowflies are active. Where circumstances indicate, application of insecticidal wound dressings is recommended.

Mulesing should be performed between 2 and 12 weeks of age and, if possible, should be done in conjunction with any other lamb marking operations that are to be done. It must not be performed on animals over 6 months of age without anaesthesia.

After mulesing, lambs should not be disturbed but observed from a distance for 3 weeks, or until the wounds have healed, for signs of flystrike to the wounds. During this time yarding or mustering should be avoided because of the potential to cause damage to wounds and make them more susceptible to flystrike. Sheep with infested wounds should be quietly caught and treated without delay.

9.6 Pizzle Dropping

Pizzle dropping is sometimes performed to reduce pizzle rot, wetting of the belly wool by urine and resultant flystrike in the region of the pizzle. The need for this operation should be considered according to the risk of pizzle rot and pizzle strike, and information should be sought on the correct procedure from the State Department of Natural Resources and Environment.

9.7 Teeth Grinding/Trimming

Grinding, clipping or trimming of teeth must not be performed as a routine flock measure as these procedures do not have any beneficial effect on health, well-being or productivity of the animals, but do have the potential to cause significant pain.

Corrective dental procedures on individual sheep may be undertaken to alleviate a specific dental problem if considered to be beneficial to its health and well-being.

10. Humane Destruction of Sheep

Effective and humane methods of euthanasia which cause a quick and painless death include either shooting with a firearm or by stunning with a captive-bolt pistol (captive bolt penetrating stunner) followed by bleeding.

10.1 Firearms

A suitable firearm for euthanasia is a .22 calibre rifle or .32 calibre humane killer pistol used at short range but not placed directly on the head.

Disadvantages of the use of a firearm are hazards to human safety and the possibility of not being legal on public property.

10.2 Captive-bolt Penetrating Stunner (Pistol)

An alternative to the firearm is a captive-bolt penetrating stunner which uses blank cartridges colour coded for the amount of power required for the species of animal being destroyed. The stunner is placed firmly against the skull before firing. The frontal approach is preferred as recent evidence casts doubt on the humaneness of the poll approach. The concussion stunner (non-penetrating) is not recommended.

The main advantage of the captive-bolt is the safety factor.

Animals stunned with a captive-bolt pistol must be bled out immediately.

The positions and direction of the line of fire for either polled or horned sheep are shown in Appendix 2.

Sheep may be destroyed by overdose of anaesthetic under veterinary supervision.

Appendix 1: Special Requirements for Intensive Sheep Systems

1. Selection of Sheep

Sheep should be carefully observed and those found to be unsuited to the system should be released to paddock grazing.

2. Preventive Health Management

- 2.1 Animals may need to be treated for internal and external parasites before entering an intensive system.
- 2.2 Vaccination with 6 in 1 vaccine against Clostridial diseases and Caseous Lymphadenitis is recommended.

3. Environmental Requirements

- 3.1 The site should not be subject to flooding, and should be away from fire hazards and relatively protected from adverse weather.

- 3.2 Sheep should not be kept in, or exposed to, any environment where the air is so contaminated with dust or noxious chemicals as to be detrimental to their welfare.
- 3.3 Sheep houses should be designed either for effective natural ventilation, or with mechanical ventilators to assist in the removal of excessive heat, moisture, carbon dioxide, dust, noxious gases and infectious organisms from the environment. Internal distribution of air is required in a manner appropriate to the location of the animals and the design of the building.
- 3.4 Adequate fire fighting equipment should be available to control a fire in any sheep housing shed, building or feedlot.

4. Floor Space Requirements

The sheep must have sufficient space to stand, lie down, stretch and groom, and to perform normal patterns of behaviour.

5. Food

- 5.1 Sheep being introduced to an intensive feeding system, particularly high starch diets, should be given time to adjust both to the new dietary regime and the troughing. As a guide, conversion to a grain-based diet can be achieved by gradually replacing roughage over a period of 7–14 days. Where sheep are being introduced to a diet containing more than 60% cereal grain, the roughage should be gradually withdrawn over a minimum of 3 weeks.
- 5.2 Adequate trough space should be provided. Where sheep are being fed in groups on an ad-lib basis, or where the trough contains food for up to 15 hours per day, a minimum of 2 cm of trough space per sheep is appropriate. Where smaller amounts of food are offered at set feeding times, up to 20 cm of trough space, to allow all sheep to stand and feed at the same time, is needed to reduce adverse feeding competition.
- 5.3 Close monitoring, and identification and treatment of shy feeders should remain one of the manager's major concerns throughout the feedlotting period and especially during the introduction of sheep to novel fodder.

6. Water

- 6.1 Fresh drinkable water in clean troughs should be available in sufficient quantities at all times. Sheep in feedlots may drink up to 6 litres per day during hot weather.
- 6.2 Where nipple drinkers or automatic feeders are used in group penning systems, one drinking nipple should be provided for every 15–30 sheep, with a minimum of two per pen. One watering bowl is required for each 60 sheep. Sheep may need to be trained for a few days to use nipple drinkers.
- 6.3 Where water troughing is used, at least 1.5 cm per sheep is recommended, provided inlet pipe sizes and water pressure are sufficient to keep water in the troughs under all circumstances. Poor water pressure, and inlet pipes or thirsty sheep may be reasons for the trough length to be increased. A minimum trough length of 30 cm, plus 1.5 cm per sheep is recommended for mobs of up to 500.
- 6.4 Drinking equipment must be inspected daily (or more often in hot weather) to ensure it is operating correctly and that pipes, taps and ball valves are not blocked. Troughs should be equipped with drain plugs to assist cleaning. Where grain is fed, troughs should be cleaned at least daily.

When an intensive sheep husbandry enterprise is first established or a new water source is used, the water should be tested for minerals and organisms which may be toxic and advice obtained on its suitability for sheep. Information on water testing can be obtained from the local office of the Department of Natural Resources and Environment.

Application No. 2001/000159

The land affected by the Amendment, known as the Clarendon Street site, is the land generally containing the existing Freemasons Hospital and its associated facilities situated on the south-east corner of Albert Street and Clarendon Street, East Melbourne, being all of the land described in the following Certificates of Title: Volume 9349, Folio 016; Volume 5010, Folio 881.

The land affected by the application is the Clarendon Street site, as described above, together with the Albert Street site, being the land generally containing the Dallas Brooks Hall, Masonic Centre and Freemasons Hospital Medical Centre and existing car park, situated on the north-east corner of Eades and Albert Streets, East Melbourne, being all of the land described in Certificate of Title Volume 8261, Folio 043.

The Amendment proposes to rezone the Clarendon Street site from Public Use Zone to Residential 1 Zone; introduce a Design and Development Overlay (DDO) over part of the Clarendon Street site and modification to Schedule 20 to the DDO to provide controls over the future development of the land; change various parts of the Municipal Strategic Statement to provide clearer policy direction and to strategically reinforce the redevelopment of the amendment site.

The application is for a permit to develop and use the Clarendon Street site for residential purposes comprising 154 dwellings together with associated amenities and facilities including a convenience shop and cafe and the retention and refurbishment of parts of the original hospital building and the three terrace houses at Nos. 128–132 Grey Street, East Melbourne; develop and use the Albert Street site for a new hospital, office/medical facilities and associated amenities and facilities and a new Masonic Centre together with associated amenities and facilities. The development would allow demolition of the Dallas Brooks Hall and the consolidation of the Freemasons Hospital's services and operations onto one site.

The person who requested the Amendment and the applicant for the permit is Bovis Land Lease acting on behalf of Grand Lodge Holding Limited and Freemasons Hospital.

You may inspect the Amendment and the application, and any documents that support the Amendment and application, and the explanatory report about the Amendment and application at the office of the planning authority, Department of Infrastructure, Planning Information Centre, Upper Plaza, Nauru House, 80 Collins Street, Melbourne and at the offices of the Melbourne City Council, 6th Floor, Council House, 200 Little Collins Street, Melbourne.

This can be done during office hours and is free of charge.

Any person who may be affected by the Amendment or by the granting of the permit may make a submission to the planning authority.

The closing date for submissions is 9 July 2001. A submission must be sent to: Minister for Planning, Attention: Adrian Williams, Planning Panels Victoria, Department of Infrastructure, PO Box 2797Y, Melbourne 3001.
